

What are the Limits of Free Speech?

September 19, 2013

11 a.m.-Noon

Dina's Place – DiGiorgio Campus Center

Free and open to the public.

In celebration of Constitution Day, Stephen Cox, attorney at law will hold a discussion about the limits of free speech. Cox will examine the limits that national security impose on the right to speak freely and also the government's right to limit "offensive speech." He will examine the fine line between what is considered free speech and what is not considered free speech. Students are invited to participate in this important conversation.

Cox graduated from Harvard College, summa cum laude, and Harvard Law School, cum laude. As an attorney he helps businesses in complex litigation and arbitration matters. He has represented clients in bench and jury trials and in appeals to state and federal appellate courts, including the United States Supreme Court. He also serves as the president of the Board of Directors of the Pilgrim's Inn in Rock Hill.

Stephen Cox

John C. West Forum on Politics and Policy

