

PRESERVE, INTERPRET & EDUCATE

The Winthrop University Archives and Special Collections is the repository for historically valuable records relating to the history of Winthrop University, women, and South Carolina, particularly the heritage of the Catawba Region. As the memory center for all university records of historical significance, the Archives' purpose is to provide physical protection for such materials and to make them available to students, faculty, staff, alumni, scholars and members of the community who are interested in researching and writing about history.

COLLEGE OF ARTS & SCIENCES

DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY

"The subjects themselves are diverse and can take you anywhere from Modern Japanese History to the age of Alexander the Great or even the history of sports, making this a history program that has something for everybody."
- Vladimir Markarov '20

Do you enjoy bingeing on Game of Thrones and Peaky Blinders, or watching owls deliver mail to Harry Potter in the Great Hall? Why not explore the real thing (minus wizards and dragons) with professors whose excavation of the past is the kind of stuff that sets the stage for Hollywood's histories and many of its stories and fantasies. Our students can stroll to the Louise Pettus Archives and Special Collections and consult fascinating resources ranging from medieval manuscripts that are generating buzz around the world at the moment to a collection on the All-American Girls Baseball League that inspired the Tom Hanks film, A League of Their Own. Best of all – at Winthrop, this takes place in an environment of small classes and a warm and welcoming "History Hall" that invites students to hang out, talk history and occasionally share pizza. You should check us out.

SO WHY WINTHROP?

Marketable Skill Development

More than 90% of our graduates produce an authentic piece of writing based on primary research.

Published
Scholars & Mentors

All members of the history department are active in their research field and consistently publish and present findings.

Endless Opportunities

Majors develop skills in research, writing, argumentation, data interpretation and critical thinking to help succeed in any career.

 Questions? Contact Us!

www.winthrop.edu/cas/history | 803/323-2173 | history@winthrop.edu