

Dr. Jenny Schafer Abstract

Research interests: My research focuses on the effects of disturbance on plant structure and function, plant population dynamics, community composition, and ecosystem processes.

I am particularly interested in the mechanisms by which plants survive fire, including allocation to bark and resprouting ability, and how variation in fire regimes affects plant community dynamics and nutrient availability. Understanding the effects of disturbance at multiple scales is necessary to make conservation and management decisions.