Jordan Hamrick – December 2019 graduate – “I have really enjoyed the interdisciplinary and highly diverse nature of the coursework that the program features. This aspect has allowed me to “weave” multiple disciplines such as anthropology, religion, philosophy, and science, into my chosen field of study. Also, the instructors who work together to create this program are top-notch and are willing to work with students to make known to them the wide array of career opportunities associated with the environmental field.”
