Recently, Jaycee Dugard has been in the news coming forward for the first time in almost two years since she was rescued from being held captive. I had the opportunity to read her autobiography, A Stolen Life, this summer and have seen the famous interview she did with Diane Sawyer. I have continued to be drawn to her strength and resilience in making the best of such a horrible situation. I was also very intrigued by her fascination with pine cones. The last thing she remembers reaching out for as she was being abducted, in what she refers to as her free life was a pinecone. She has held onto her love of them and their sense of freedom and a new beginning for her, so much so, that Jaycee wears a pine cone necklace, and has started her own foundation to help victims of trauma through the purchase of this same necklace. This piece is by no means meant to act out the play by play story of Jaycee's time in captivity. I hope to convey images of fear, resentment, anger, overall perseverance, and a will to survive as shown by Jaycee, as well as the co-dependency and mental illness that plagued Phillip and his wife.

Visit: http://thejaycfoundation.org/ to find out how you can help.

Pina Bausch was the director of Tanztheater Wuppertal in Germany for over 35 years. After studying dance at Juilliard and performing in NY she returned home to Germany to spark a return to the dance theatre movement and styling of previous choreographers. Her work cannot be easily described; a collaboration of music, theatre, visual art, movement, and political/social commentary, transporting the audience into a world of unexpected, terrifying, beauty, wondrously, challenging the visual life. She is most famously noted as saying “I’m not interested in how people move, but what moves them.” In June 2009, five days after being diagnosed with cancer, Pina passed away, leaving her indelible mark on modern dance.
“Arbeit Macht Fret”

Choreographer  Mary Beth D. Young
Music          John Williams
Music Arrangement  Ziñorl Broñola
Musicians      Keyboard: Ziñorl Broñola
                  Violin: Christopher Fowler
Dancers        Ty’quan Christie, Ashton Duncan,
                  Krysten Funderburk, Cassie Graham
                  Fredrico Harrell, Danielle Hausmann,
                  Brittany Keane, Dashae Middleton,
                  Mackinsey Shahan, Ashlea Sovetts*,
                  Kirsten Stallings*

~A 10 MINUTE INTERMISSION~

“The Art of Dancers”

Edgar Degas is known as “The Painter of Dancers.” Of all of his artistic works more than half are of dancers. Reflecting the practical lives of dancers was important to Degas; he was not focused on the beauty of the entire ballet production itself but rather wanted to show that the “Goddesses on stage” were also human. He was fascinated by life behind the scenes and wanted to capture what the audience couldn’t see, the realism of being a ballerina in that day and age. This piece is a reflection and celebration of Edgar Degas’ masterful art and the recognition and admiration he still, to this day, brings to dance and dancers through his work.

“Stand Up”

Stand Up celebrates the “International Biographies” of each dancer in the piece. Their families come from Africa, Germany, Ireland, Italy and Poland. Through understanding personal histories, the dancers journey through a process of understanding how to celebrate differences and engage in the present.

“Arbeit Macht Fret”

Maximilian Kolbe:

Maximilian Kolbe was a Catholic priest from Poland who was arrested and sent to Auschwitz for assisting and hiding Jews and Catholics from the Nazis. The choreographer of this dance piece had the opportunity to visit the Auschwitz camp several years ago where Maximilian Kolbe was imprisoned and later died. His story is a remarkable one and this choreographic work is an attempt to tell his story using an aesthetic process. Maximilian Kolbe was canonized a saint by Pope John Paul II on October 10, 1982.

“The Last Light”

The “Widow” Combs

Strip mining increased in scale around 1961 in East Kentucky. By 1964, large parts of the land had been gutted, especially in Pike, Knott, Harlan and Letcher Counties. Many protested the actions of the coal companies, among them the “Widow” Combs. In 1965, this frail sixty one year old woman tried to protect her twenty acre farm by first standing, then lying down in front of the bulldozer about to tear open her land. Law officers soon carted her off her property. I wrote the poem to honor this woman’s struggle and the land’s struggle to survive.
Production Staff

Stage Manager Megan Friend*
Assistant Stage Managers Kaitlyn Edens, JT Rider
Light Board Operator Michelle Slattery
Sound Board Operator Sean Rodriguez
Projection Operator Kathleen Rishebarger
Fly Operator Ann Marie Calabro*
Scenic Studio Assistants Kyle Amick*, Erin Bailie, Philip Calabro, Hayden Henderson Jocelin Lehner, Kayla Piscatelli*
Scenic Construction/Lighting Crew Joseph Fry, Carrie Hilliard, Jessica Marohn, Zachary McCrorey, Tyra Moody, JT Rider, Sean Rodriguez, Leah Smith
Costume Studio Assistants Cecily Bingham*, Allison Keller, Allie Molinari, Sydney Moore, Cassie Prodan, Brittany Steele, Amber Westbrook
Costume Construction Crew Jessica Berry, Ann Marie Calabro* Jed Cockerill, Carrie Hilliard, Geoff Jordan*, Michelle Slattery, Sara Sopko
Box Office Manager Cecily Bingham*
Box Office Staff Sarah Gunter*, Geoff Jordan* Melissa O'Mara*, Briana Parks*, Nathan Roux*, Amber Westbrook*
House Manager Russell Luke
Graphic Designer Bara Wetherell

“Plucked”
Choreographer Meg Schriffen
Music “Do You Listen to Your Dreams?” by Dieggo Stocco
“Lamento” by Ryuichi Sakamoto
“Music From A Tree” by Dieggo Stocco
Dancers Amanda Floyd, Nikesha Nelson, Shannon Williams, Ashlea Sovetts* (US)

“verlust von breath”
Choreographer Stacy Garrett McConnell
Music “Masque of the Red Death” by James Kevin Gray
(based on Masque of the Red Death by Edgar Allan Poe)
Musicians Wednesday & Friday Piano: Janice Bradner
Flute: Jill O'Neill
Clarinet: Catherine Bushman
Dancers Lexi Bruns, Meghan Burgess, Krysten Funderburk, Dana Generette, Jennifer Harper, Nia Harris, Shelby Mosher
Savannah Schoenborn, Rochelle Stone*, Danielle White
Dashae Middleton (US), Shelby Scott (US)

Acknowledgement to Kevin Gray for permission to use his score.

(US) indicates understudy dancer

Acknowledgements
York County Ballet Company

In compliance with Winthrop University policy, we ask smokers to use the designated area across the driveway from the front of Johnson Hall.

*Denotes membership in Alpha Psi Omega, the National Honorary Theatre Society

Become a fan of the arts at Winthrop. Join us on Facebook at:

Sign up for tweets about arts events at Winthrop at:
http://twitter.com/winthroparts

View images and video of Winthrop arts events on Youtube at:
http://www.youtube.com/user/WinthropArts