Kaila Dockal is a senior dance education major graduating in the spring of 2016. She has been dancing for the past 19 years studying the styles of ballet, tap, jazz, hip-hop, contemporary, modern and lyrical. Kaila has been teaching dance for the past six years, teaching ballet, tap, jazz and hip-hop at a local studio. Kaila is eager to see her choreography take the stage in her final choreography showcase of her college career.

Michael Arrington, from Jefferson, South Carolina is a senior dance major. Since attending Winthrop University, Michael has been involved in a number of productions such as Winthrop Dance Theatre and Winthrop Dance Repertory Theatre. He is excited to be showcasing his second work in the Senior Choreography Showcase.

Mason Diaz is a senior dance major with an emphasis in K-12 education. He considers himself both an artist in dance and in teaching having experienced firsthand the skill and creativity demanded by both. Having started dancing later in life at the age of 16, he works to keep improving technically and artistically so that this late start never keeps him from achieving his goals. He intends to perform and teach dance after graduation before pursuing a graduate degree in dance.

Dashae Middleton is a senior dance major at Winthrop University. He is from Beaufort, South Carolina, where he first started dancing at Beaufort High participating in the musical Fame, and from then on he knew that he loved dance. After that he got formal jazz, ballet and hip hop training at Studio B Dance Centre located in Beaufort, working with their performing competition dance team. At Winthrop he has participated in Winthrop Dance Theatre and Senior Choreography Showcase furthering his education in dance through Modern dance forms. He has also been able to perform at ACDA Festival in 2013 that was located in Tampa, Florida, performing in the formal concert for the piece spectrum speAks.

Danielle Cannon is finishing her final year here at Winthrop University. She is hoping to continue to build onto her technical and creative skills pertaining to dance. With those skills, she wants to create performances that entertain and inspire audiences of all ages. Danielle is hopeful to do so professionally after graduation, and is excited to practice her creativity in both student choreography showcases this year.

Kristin Ward is a senior dance major with a concentration in performance at Winthrop University. She is from Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, and working on completing her degree this December. She has performed at Winthrop over her past three and a half years here, and received her first opportunity to choreograph her sophomore year for the Rock Hill RockHettes. She has also choreographed for the student choreography showcase last year, and is finishing up her senior choreography thesis this semester. After completing her degree, Kristin looks forward to auditioning to be a performer, and later on auditioning to become a choreographer.
Le Boeuf sur le Toit, 1920

The Ox on the Roof: The Nothing-Doing Bar,
a farce about Prohibition-era America

A collaboration of the Department of Dance, UNC Charlotte; the Winthrop University Dance Program; and the cast

Scenario: Jean Cocteau

Choreography/restaging: Ann Dils and cast

Music: Darius Milhaud

Props Master: Hugh Bryant, Mitra Salehi

Lighting Consultant: Alex Baesen

Costumes: Trent Pcenicni, Dustin Lail

Set: UNC Charlotte and Winthrop University

Cast (in order of appearance):
- Bartender: Haley Morrison
- Boy: Emily Morgan
- Boxer: Michael Arrington, Dontrell Brailsford (Sat.)
- Red-haired Woman: Kaila Dockal
- Elegant Woman: Kelly Ozust
- Gambler: Alex Aguilar
- Aerialist: Dustin Lail
- Policeman: Mason Diaz

Program notes: Our setting of Le Boeuf sur le Toit retains Jean Cocteau’s idea of a farce about American prohibition as well as most of the actions indicated in the scenario he wrote for the work in 1920. We have also retained Cocteau’s love of celebrity. In the piece you will find homages to Americans of the 1910s, among them Jack Johnson, the first African-American heavyweight champion boxer; Barbette, an aerialist and female impersonator; and Maud Allen, the most famous of many Salomé dancers performing on vaudeville stages during this period. We have made important changes. Cocteau’s cast was costumed in oversized masks; in our version, only the Policeman is masked while other performers are transformed through makeup, wigs, and costuming. Cocteau’s all-male cast of circus performers is replaced by a cast of dancers. Cocteau’s cast moved in slow motion; our cast is energetic, conveying the story and characters Cocteau lays out through a mélange of movement: social dance forms such as Charleston, Cakewalk, and Apache, a violent dance that the French thought imitated American gangsters; and bits of ballet and silent film gestures.

Many thanks to Donna and Melissa Pihos for protecting the Ox props and costumes and thereby making this production possible.

Choreographers

Jean Maurice Eugène Clément Cocteau (1899-1963) was a French writer, designer, playwright, artist and filmmaker. His performance work includes scenarios or libretti for Parade (1917); Le Boeuf sur le Toit (1920); Le Train Bleu (1924); and Le Jeune Homme et la Mort (1946).

Ann Dils is professor and chair of the Department of Dance, University of North Carolina at Charlotte. She has taught in the Department of Dance and Women's and Gender Studies Program, University of North Carolina at Greensboro and at Teachers’ College, Columbia University. Her co-edited reader, Moving History / Dancing Cultures is in use in dance departments across the United States.

Bridget O’Connor is a senior dance education major from Quincy, Massachusetts. Throughout her four years at Winthrop University, she has performed in Winthrop Dance Theatre, the Senior Choreography Showcase and was chosen as this year’s scholarship recipient for the Winthrop University RockHettes. Her first choreographic work "Attenzione” was selected for the Charlotte Emerging Dance Awards this past March, and she is happy to present her second choreographic work at the Senior Choreography Showcase. She would like to thank her family and friends for all of their love and support, as well as her professors at Winthrop for all of their help and guidance. Bridget will be graduating in May and hopes to continue dancing, performing, and teaching for the rest of her life.

Kristin Ramirez is from Waxhaw, North Carolina, and this will be her 19th year of dance. She is graduating in May 2016 with a B.S. in biology and a B.A. in dance performance, and is planning on attending physical therapy school after graduation. Kristin has taken several master classes, has performed in student choreography showcases, repertory group, Winthrop Dance Theatre, and the RockHettes during her time at Winthrop. Kristin would like to thank her family, friends, and inspiring professors for their love and support.

Niki Credit started dancing as a sophomore in high school with color guard and continued to perform until she graduated in 2011 from Fort Mill High School. She then came to Winthrop in the fall as a psychology major and after one semester realized it was not for her. She then changed her major to dance. She is now in her fourth year at Winthrop, but third year in the dance department. She teaches color guard at Fort Mill High School and plans on performing both dance and color guard in the future.

Devon DiFederico is a senior dance performance major at Winthrop University. She is from Tampa, Florida, and has danced for 17 years. This is her second time choreographing at Winthrop. She competed for a studio in Florida for nine years and has attended many conferences like ACDA with Winthrop University. She also attended Jennifer Archibald’s Summer Intensive ARCHCORE40 in summer 2014 in New York City and Bates Dance Festival in Maine last summer. She can’t wait to keep progressing and furthering her career in her last semesters at Winthrop University.

A mind affected by trauma houses two halves of the same broken person: one sunken into depression and consumed by anger and the other naïve and in denial of the events that caused this mental break.
