- Shannon Snelgrove

“I was super shocked when I first found out that I had been accepted into the McNair program. As a matter of fact, I think I had a mini freak-out after I got the call from Kierra telling me that I had been accepted into the program. Honestly, at first I could not believe that “I” was chosen for such a prestigious award. Being chosen as a McNair Scholar is a life changing opportunity that I could not be more thankful for.”

From the Program Director

My greatest joy as McNair Director is watching our Scholars be recognized for their excellence. This semester has provided lots of joy. Every Scholar we’ve served this year has earned bragging rights. Here are just a few examples. Leah Brown and Sarah Wicks were selected for the College of Arts & Science’s highest honor for student research, the Inez Bell Caskey Scholar Award, in Social Sciences and Science and Mathematics respectively. Ian Deas was awarded the Sunbelt Rentals Scholarship and Alex Foster was just awarded the Kate Wofford Scholarship from the College of Arts and Sciences. [This Scholarship is known as “the Scholar’s Scholarship.”] Shalace Rose’s athletic prowess has earned her recognition at several track meets this spring, including first place for her relay team at the Charlotte Invitational, and the Robert H. Breakfield Award (for leadership, sportsmanship, and academic integrity).

You can see why our office McNair Pride Board has been active this spring. Right now, it includes the list of SOURCE presenters and several graduation announcements. For example, Chauntice Buck shared her photo announcement for her graduation. She has earned her Master’s in Counseling at UGA. Congrats Chauntice! Congrats also to Nicole Drown who graduates this week with her MAT program from Winthrop. We’d love to hear of other graduations and fellow ships. Please share your good news with us like Keisha Carden did. Keisha was awarded the McNair Graduate Fellowship at the University of Alabama. We love Scholars’ recognition even more when it comes with funding!

Two alumni funding announcements on the Pride Board are bringing national recognition to our Scholars and the Program. Hannah Swan (University of Utah) was awarded an NSF Graduate Research Fellowship to support her computing research. This is the first NSF GRF for an alumnus of our program and earning this fellowship is a BIG deal. Destinee Johnson (Stanford) was awarded the Knowles Teaching Fellowship. As part of this prestigious award, Destinee will join a five-year cohort of STEM teachers. Destinee is the first Winthrop Scholar to earn the Knowles Fellowship and we are so excited about what this opportunity will afford her. I hope we will have many NSF and Knowles announcements in the years ahead.

Thank you Scholars and Alumni for applying the work ethic you showed in your first summer research experience to endeavors like these. The payoff will be 10-fold. And, please keep updating us so we can offer support and share your joy.

Scholars discuss some of their recent accomplishments and contributions gained from the program...

Jessica Fuentes
"I was nominated and in the top three finalists for Spanish Teacher of the Year for the state of South Carolina. The ceremony was in November. ... I am starting my Ed.S program in Administration through Arkansas State University."

Taylor Toves
“When I was selected to be in the McNair Scholars Program I was so honored! I could not wait to share the news with my family. It is such a great opportunity that I have been blessed with and I just want to make sure that I do not take this for granted. I plan to take full advantage of everything that this program has to offer.”

Kristin Ramirez
"I've presented my summer research, "The Physical Fitness Components and Posture Screening of Female Competitive Dancers" at the SEACSM (Southeast American College of Sports Medicine) conference in Jacksonville, FL."

Cecile Gadson
“I earned a 4.0 during my first semester in my doctoral program at the University of Tennessee.”

Aaron Fountain
“Recently, my McNair research paper titled ‘The War in the Schools: San Francisco Bay Area High Schools and the Anti-Vietnam War Movement, 1965-1973,’ was accepted for publication by the California History journal. One thing I learned about trying to get published is to never give up. I have been re-editing and submitting the paper for a year and a half (to a total of four journals and seven submissions) and at times I felt that it would never get published. As the editor of the top journal in American history (The Journal of American History) told my class, publishing an article is a process. You should expect to get rejected on the first submission. The paper does not have to be perfect the first time, but it should not be sloppy. Another thing that is important to do is to acknowledge any shortcomings and methods that you cannot or will not do. Many reviewers have critiqued my paper in terms of how they would have written it, and I had to lay out why I was not writing it in that particular way. The last thing I will say is that you must know your argument. A perfectly written article for one journal might not be good for another.”
New to the Winthrop McNair Family

Several Alums have recently added or are expecting to add to their families...

Alum Derion Reid and Heather Williams got engaged on December 22, 2014.

Former GA Shannon Simmons and Ramone Hemphill will be married on September 19, 2015.
My first encounter with the Ailey organization was at New York City Center watching beautiful dancers perform Revelations. Seeing male dancers like Clifton Brown and Guillermo Asca (who is a fellow Queens native and someone I work alongside with now) inspired me to become a dancer. From the balcony seats, I journeyed onward as a student, then guest choreographer, and then as Assistant to the Co-Director of the Ailey School. This has always been my dream company and to experience it in so many capacities is something I am proud of. My ultimate goal is to be a member of the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater Company and inspire other boys and young men to pursue dance. Although I am new to this position, I am not new to this organization and that has made the transition back to New York City and my first full time job easier. I still get to dance and choreograph, with opportunities already presenting themselves, and I have a one bedroom apartment! The excitement for this path I am trailblazing cannot be tamed and I look forward to sharing more of it with you.
“As a new McNair Scholar in 2012, I had the privilege to watch the program’s infamous video about the life of Ronald E. McNair. I never forgot his struggle and his “McNair Moment.” The McNair Scholars program has truly changed my life since that day I watched the biography, and it is all because of Dr. McNair. He is a great inspiration to every scholar.” - Kierra James (GA)

On January 28, 1986, Ron McNair died during the launch of the Space Shuttle Challenger in Cape Canaveral, FL. It is through his legacy that McNair Scholars across the U.S. receive the opportunity to complete summer research and attend graduate schools around the world.
I really enjoyed my time as the McNair GA. The McNair program staff was influential in helping me attend graduate school, so I appreciated being involved with making this possible for other students. However, I have decided to take a break from graduate school after the birth of my new baby girl, Madison. This means that I will be ending my time as the McNair GA in addition to my graduate program. Madison was born about a month early, and I believe that both my girls, Madison and Kameryn, deserve to be my main focus for awhile. I would like to thank the McNair staff for all the help and encouragement throughout this time and I would like to say goodbye to those of you I contacted and got to know personally during my time as GA. — Kierra James Kierra, I am grateful for your contributions to the program as a Scholar and as a staff member. It made me sad to see you go and it helps that you keep in touch. Even more, I feel fortunate to get to watch your daughters grow and to see your pride in their development. Kamryn and Madison are both very special to me as is their mother.
