i. Intervention Strategies
g. Recruitment - Facilities
h. Retention Strategies
   i. Test student early – midterm grades
   ii. Advise students to use tutor services to improve grades
   iii. Affordability
   iv. Increase frequency and quality of faculty/student interactions
   v. Explore strategies that encourage development of academic/arts community feeling among majors – e-mail, Facebook. Meetings, etc.
   vi. Studies show that students form feelings about institution within the first week of enrollment
   vii. Revise advising strategies and record feedback from current students
       1. CVPA is about 10% below satisfaction rates of other WU colleges viii. Satisfactory Academic Progress (SAP) – tied to students’ financial aid
       1. 2.00 minimum GPA for federal financial aid
       2. Students must complete 2/3 of all hours attempted
          a. If 19 hours are registered for and only 12 hours are completed, that is less than 2/3 and could stop the student from receiving financial aid
          b. This includes summer enrollment
       3. If you notice a student who early on is having trouble, refer them to the Counseling Center (testing strategies, test anxiety); academic Success center; or Anna Frederick’s office.
       4. Withdrawing from a course can have financial aid implications.
          a. Students should think/talk about it with advisors before they withdraw from a class.
       5. Weave this info into Orientation / ACAD
          a. GPA, hours attempted, etc.
   ix. Retention/Completion – If you have ideas, share these within your Department and with your Chair who share this information with the Dean’s Office
   x. Non-Returning Students – why? Surveys?
      1. Financial, grades, etc.
         a. Students with lower GPAs often don’t return
      2. Look at curriculum sequencing
         a. If the average for a freshman class is a ‘C’ maybe the course is more suited for sophomores or juniors
   xi. Recruitment → Retention
      1. If we recruit good students we will have higher retention
      2. Dean’s Meritorious Scholarships - higher retention
   xii. CVPA & Admissions meeting
      1. Website flexibility will be discussed

Assistant Dean - Stephanie Milling

Course Syllabi
All course syllabi should follow the CVPA syllabus guidelines. Please follow the format that is posted on the CVPA website. There are several changes to the syllabus guidelines this year. All faculty teaching courses within the Touchstone Program DO NOT need to include the Touchstone Goals and Objectives. Instead, you need to include the appropriate ULC(s) in your syllabus. In addition, all faculty should label the syllabus change policy in their syllabi as opposed to simply including a statement indicating that the course content, calendar, etc. are subject to change. Finally, faculty should turn in syllabi for ALL courses they teach—including courses in other departments and colleges—to their department chair by the appropriate deadline.

Incomplete Grades
Grades of incomplete at the end of the semester need to be documented, and all documentation should be turned in to the department chair. If a student should receive a grade of incomplete at the end of the semester, an Incomplete Grade Form should be filed in the department office. The Incomplete Grade Form is located on the CVPA website.

Teaching Observations
Beginning this semester, a pool of senior faculty who are willing to conduct teaching observations of junior faculty will be developed in the College of Visual and Performing Arts. The pool and observations will be college-wide to assist smaller departments with few senior faculty in this important service. Over the summer, the Dean and Asst. Dean developed a formal observation form with feedback from the department chairs. The form was based on observation forms used at other institutions and important assessment tools currently being used within the university to measure student success such as the ULCs and the Global Learning Initiative. Please contact Stephanie Milling at millings@winthrop.edu if you are interested serving in this capacity. Senior faculty who observe can include this service on their annual report, and junior faculty can include observations in their tenure/promotion materials.

CVPA Education Faculty
There two matters (edTPA and the junior-level field placement) that we will need to revisit this year while we continue with the transition into the new core curriculum in the College of Education. Stephanie Milling will be contacting education faculty as a group to continue conversations and share information on these two important topics.

New Faculty Mentoring
The Dean and Assistant Dean will schedule some sessions to mentor new faculty about promotion/tenure. Dates for these sessions will be announced soon. While these sessions will be specifically designed for new faculty, anyone is welcome to attend if they think they might find the information helpful.

Department of Design – Chad Dresbach

This semester we look forward to welcoming back professor Gerry Derksen both to the University and to the active lineup of faculty in DoD; Gerry brings back many exciting, and even inspiring, experiences from his time spent working with IIT, and has many ideas about how some of these practices may influence and in some cases may be modified and used by Winthrop. Mr. Derksen is currently gearing up for his attendance at 2 conferences he has been invited to in Asia.

New faculty in INDS: Mr. Bill Furman replacing Mr. David Beatty. With Mr. Beatty's departure, Professor Sangwon Sohn assumes the role of "coordinator" of the Interior Design program

David "Doc" Brown has kept busy with freelance illustration commissions as he and wife Sally await the arrival of their first grandchild (expected: mid-September).

Enrollment starts seem to be:
Interior Design - 14 students
VCOM - 41 students
- which is neither dramatically 'up' or 'down' from previous semesters and recent years for either program.
Alumni news:
Amami Antia-Obong ('10) graduated with her MS in Medical Illustration from the University of Illinois at Chicago. She has just passed Part One of her Board Certification Exam this summer.

Katie Kath ('11), and recent MFA in Illustration graduate from SCAD, was selected as one of TWO winners, nationally, for the Student Illustrator Scholarship for the Society of Children's Book Writers & Illustrators. As part of her award package, Ms. Kath is attending the summer 2013 conference in Los Angeles during August. She also just got picked up by Shannon Associates, as her Children's Book agency.

Matt Andrews ('12) completed three very large diorama murals for the York County Culture and Heritage Museum for their new Pleistocene exhibits, currently up.

EXHIBITIONS:
Taiyo la Paix's exhibition includes large-scale, vibrant paintings and delicately rendered drawings inspired by the aesthetics of Japanese manga and anime and commercial illustration. La Paix creates an elaborate romantic fantasy world where he appears as a heroic alter ego along with his buxom and desirable female muse Papillia. Using references from art history, advertising and his own personal life, la Paix’s artwork acts as a source of escape from periods of personal struggle and explores society’s relationship with consumerism.

La Paix was born in Philadelphia but raised in Kyoto, Japan. He returned to the United States at age 14 and went on to attend Middlebury College in Vermont where he graduated with a B.F.A. in 1994. La Paix has exhibited his work in North Carolina, Florida and California, and includes work in a number of private collections. La Paix currently resides in Asheville, North Carolina.

Mitchell Kearney, a portrait is a series of visual cues, indicators of emotions and gestures which combine to create a mood. Kearney's large-scale, vivid portraits explore the dichotomy between the presentness of the image and his personal relationship to the subject - sometimes known for only minutes or others developed for half a lifetime. The exhibition “Inside Out” shares this intimate viewpoint the artist encapsulates in the image at a “moment of revelation.”

Kearney, a native New Yorker, earned his B.F.A. at the School of Visual Arts in NYC. He then began his commercial photography career working by day for Len Prince Photography on assignments for Cartier Jewelry including Louie Cartier’s Art-Deco originals. After hours, he captured the beginnings of New York City’s Punk Rock music scene, during the mid to late 70’s. Opening his first photo-studio in Charlotte in 1983, Kearney established a highly successful career photographing commercial assignments, along with creating multimedia presentations and fine art print editions.

Report from the Graduate School – Alice Burmeister

Graduate enrollments are up overall this fall, although they are slightly lower than last year in CVPA, mainly due to our suspension of the MA in Art Education program. Increasing admissions into our graduate programs remains a top priority, and any ideas regarding strategies on how to do that would be welcome. Our graduate scholarship funds and number of GAships remains the same for this year as last year. The Graduate School is hosting a Welcome Reception and Campus Tour for all incoming graduate students this Thursday evening from 6:00-7:30 in the Tuttle Dining Room. All current and incoming graduate students and faculty are welcome to attend. Prior to that, the Department of Fine Arts and the Winthrop University Galleries will be hosting a separate reception to welcome the new MFA students into the program from 5:00-6:00 p.m. in the Lewandowski Student Gallery. All current and new MFA students and graduate Fine Arts faculty are welcome to attend that reception as well. More information and announcements from the Graduate School will be forthcoming following the first meeting of the Graduate Directors in a couple of weeks.
Report from the Gen Ed Committee – Alice Burmeister

This year the Gen Ed Committee will be re-certifying 200-level courses. Because there are so many 200-level courses that need re-certification, they will do some of them this year, and some of them next year. Department chairs will receive notification of which 200-level courses are scheduled for this year’s voting. As in the past, a department may decide NOT to re-certify a course if they feel it does not benefit either their students or another general population of students who regularly take the course.

Report from the Gen Ed Task Force

This group met at the beginning of summer and was charged with reviewing every set of gen ed requirements for every major. The goal is to look for inconsistencies across majors, instances of “major creep”, and other problems that may be impeding student progress in their major. More details of the task force’s work will be presented once we have met again this fall.
